try, with freedom and intelligence as the instruments for its development, we stand disgraced in the eyes of mankind if we cannot, and it we do not support our own government. We can throw that support on other people only by beggary or by force. If we use the one we are a pauper nation; if we use the other we are a pirate nation. The Democratic party does not intend that we shall falsely call it taxing other people to transfer our taxes from the possessions of those who own the property of the country to the beliles and backs of those who do the work of the country. It believes that frugality is the essential virtue of free government. RECIPROCITY DENOUNCED. But, gentlemen, we are confronted with a new ery in this campaign. The Republican party. says Governor McKinley, now stands for protection and reciprocity. He was for protection slone when he framed his bill in the House, or rather permitted his beneficiaries to frame it for him, and firmly resisted all efforts of the statesman from Maine to annex reciprocity to it. No wonder that he favors the reciprocity added by the Senate. You may explore the pages of burlesque literature for anything more supremely ludierous than the so-called reciprocity of the McKinley bill. It is not reciprocity at all. It is retaliation, and worst of all, retaliation on our own people. It punishes American citizens for the necessities or the follies of other peoples. It says to a few small countries south of us, "if you are forced by your necessities, or led by your follies to make bread higher and searcer to your people, we will make shoes and sugar higher and scarcer to our people." And now we are told that reciprocity is to be their battle cry. Already we are regaled with pictures of Benjamin Harrison end in armor, and going forth to battle for reciprocity on a plumed steed. Simple Simon fishing for whales in his mother's rain-barrel and in great triumph capturing an occasional wiggle-waggle is the only true, realistic picture of the reciprocity of the McKinley bill. We are for the protection that protects and for the reciprocity that recip-rocales. We are in favor of protecting every sary obstacles between the American producer and the markets he is obliged to seek for his But, gentlemen, I must not keep you from the work that is before you. Let us take up that work as brothers, as patriots, as Democrats. In so large a convention as this, larger in numbers than any previous gathering of our party. and representing a larger constituency than ever before assembled in any convention, it would be strange, ominously strange, if there were not some differences of opinion on matters of policy, and some differences of judgment or of preference as to the choice of candidates.

WHAT ABOUT THE TAMMANY YOKE! It is the sign of a free democracy that it is many-voiced, and within limits of true freedom, tumultuous. It wears no collars; it serves no masters. We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that many who have heretofore followed our flag with enthusiasm are to-day calling, with excusable impatience, for immediate relief from the evils that encompass them. Whatever can be done to relieve the burdens, to restore, broaden and increase the prosperity of the people, and every part of them, within the limits and according to the principles of free government, that the Democratic party dares to promise, that it will do with all its might. Whatever is beyond this, whatever is incompatible with free government and our historic liberty, it dares not promise to any one. Inveterate evils in the body politic cannot be cured in a moment, any more than in-veterate diseases in the human system. Whoever professes the power to do so is himself de-ceived, or himself a deceiver. Our party is not a quack or a worker of miracles. It is not for me, gentlemen, the impartial servant of you all, to attempt to foreshadow what your choice should be or ought to be in the selection of your candidates. You will make that selection under your own sense of responsibility to the people you represent and to your country. One thing only I venture to say. Whoever may be your chosen leader in this campaign, no telegrams will flash across the sea from the castles of absentee tariff lords to congratulate him. But from the home of labor, from the fireside of the toller, from the hearts of all who love justice and do equity, who wish and intend that our match-less heritage of freedom shall be the commonwealth of all our people and the common oppor-tunity of all our youths, will come up prayers for his success and recruits for the great Democratic host that must strike down the heast of sectionalism and the Moloch of monopoly before we can have over again a people's government run by a people's faithful representatives.

Tremendous applause followed Chairman Wilson's address, his Democracy, as pro-cheers subsided, the delegates to the concheers subsided, the delegates to the convention almost to a man rose and gave him an ovation with yells and waving hats and umbrellas, and handkerchiefs. There was a cry from the gallery, "What's the matter with Wilson for President!" There were numerous favorable responses, to all of which Mr. Wilson shook his head and waved his hand deprecatingly. The demonstration ended with three formal cheers for the permanent chairman by the delegafor the permanent chairman by the delegation from Missouri.

Mr. Clardy, of Missouri, offered a resolution, which was the impuscy adopted, tendering the thanks of the convention to the temporary chairman, the Hon. Wm. C.
Owens, "for the able and impartial manner in which he has discharged his duties."

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON RULES. Having disposed of the temporary administration the convention proceeded to its actual business. The report of the committee on rules was first in order, and Mr. W. E. English, of Indianapolis, chairman of the committee, presented the report as

We recommend the following order of business be observed by this convention:

First—Report of the committee on credentials.

Second—Report of the committee on permanent nent organization.

Third—Report of the committee on resolutions and platform.

Fourth-Nomination of a candidate for the office of President of United States. Fifth-Nomination of a candidate for the office of Vice-president of the United States. Your committee further recommends that the rules of the last Democratic convention shall be adopted for the government of this convention. The report, as submitted, was unanimously adopted, although there had been a sharp fight in the committee over the unit rule, the vote having stood 23 to 15 in favor of the retention of the unit rale. The next order of business was the report of the committee on resolutions, but no members of the committee were present

Mr. Pheips, in making the presentation in behalf of the zine producers and miners of Missouri, said: "I present you this gavel, not made of tin or stolen from Nebraska homesteads, but mined and made in Jasper county, Missouri, and bearing the inscription, 'We Need No Protection,' as a protest against the mockery of legislation which imposes a useless tariff of 30 per cent. upon the metal as a pretext for taxing the lamp. pick, shirt and blanket of the miner more than 40 per cent." The speaker added that Missouri's electoral vote would be given to the nominees of this convention by 40,000

The chairman accepted the gavel, expressing the hope that this convention or its nominee will use this gavel to knock out of the tariff the protection upon zinc.

The chairman again called for the report of the committee on resolutions, and there being no response he directed the Secretary to call the roll of States, that the various delegations might have an opportunity to hand in the names of their members of the national committee and of the notification committee. This was done. THE DEMOCRATIC CAMEL. On motion of Mr. Walker, of Missouri, the Hon. John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky. was invited to address the convention, but a search of the convention hall failed to reveal his presence. Then there were calls for Campbell. The chairman introduced the distinguished Ohioan with the remark: "Your enthusiasm shows that among the quadrupeds, the camel is the favorite Democratic animal."

Governor Campbell after saying, amid laughter and applause, "I am afraid the audience, having no other amusement. wishes, as the chairman insinuates, to trot out the Democratic menagerie," expressed his sense of compliment conferred by the assembly, but declined to repay the kindness by inflicting a speech on the convention. He, therefore, retired after giving utterance to this suggestive sentence: "So I simply thank you and ask you when November rolls around to keep your eye on

There were cries for Secretary Daniel and Senator Voorhees, who failed to respond, and, the convention having voted to hear the Hon, William U. Hensel, of Pennsylvania, a committee was appointed to conduct him to the platform; but both Mr. Hensel and the committee got lost in the subsequent confusion. convention. After the first round of chair appoint a committee of two to wait adopted, and Davis and Hensel appointed such committee.

Then, on motion of Mr. Henry, of Mississippi, a committee was appointed to wait on Mr. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, and ask him to address the convention, the hope being that the famous editor would make one of his characteristic speeches. This design was balked by the fact that at that very moment Mr. Watterson and Mr. W. Bourke Cockran, of New York, were busy in the Associated Press room concocting a scheme by which the nomination of Mr. Cleveland could be avoided on the first ballot. After five minutes of confusion, Mr. Cockran appeared on the floor and was vociferously importuned for a speech, but declined. A minute later, in response to a formal motion, Mr. Cockran arose and said: formal motion, Mr. Cockran arose and said: Mr. Chairman. I expect to have some business with the convention later on. For the present I believe that, if there be no other business to occupy the attention of the convention, the delegates had better fortify their systems by substantial refreshments. The intellectual refreshment which the Chair afforded as will not be eclipsed by any ofator that will take the platform this day, or during the session of this convention.

Mr. Cockran resumed his seat amid great moved that the convention take a recess until 5 o'clock. The motion was put amid cries of assent and dissent, and the Chair declared the motion carried, and the convention adjourned to the hour named.

Sixteen People Injured in a Coach That Went

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. WABASH, Ind., June 22. - One of the most serious accidents in the history of the old Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan road, now the Michigan division of the Big Four, occurred this morning a mile and a half north of Berrien Center, Mich. The southbound express was running about thirty miles an hour at the point mentioned, when the rear trucks of the last car in the train climbed the rail and bounded along over the ties until a small trestle was reached when the front trucks went off also and the coach wrenched loose from the smoker and rolled down a six-foot fill, landing bottom upward in the ditch. There were sixteen passengers in the
